California Transparency in Supply Chains Act Disclosure

The California Transparency in Supply Chains Act of 2010 requires manufacturers that manufacture or sell products in the State of California to disclose their efforts, if any, to address slavery and human trafficking in their supply chains. IPG Photonics Corporation (“IPG”) is committed to complying with applicable law and conducting business in an ethical manner, as reflected in IPG’s Code of Business Conduct. Moreover, IPG’s standard purchasing slavery and human trafficking.

IPG complies with its disclosure requirements as follows:

Supply Chain Verification: IPG does not currently verify its supply chain to evaluate and address the risks of slavery and human trafficking.

Audits: IPG does not audit its suppliers to evaluate supplier compliance with IPG standards for slavery and human trafficking in supply chains.

Certification: IPG does not currently require its suppliers to certify that materials incorporated into the product comply with the laws regarding slavery and human trafficking in the country or countries where its suppliers do business.

Internal Accountability Procedures: IPG maintains internal accountability standards and procedures for all employees and contractors who fail to comply with applicable legal requirements or the IPG Code of Business Conduct. IPG's Code of Business Conduct, which governs all employees of IPG as well as all consultants hired on IPG's behalf, requires all employees and contractors to comply with all applicable laws, and provides a telephone hotline and email account for individuals to report any suspected violation of applicable laws or company standards. All reports of suspected violations are investigated, and the results of such reports are reported to IPG management when appropriate.

Training: IPG does not currently provide training to its employees and management who have direct responsibility for supply chain management. However, employees and management are expected to report any suspected violations by suppliers of any applicable law or IPG's Code of Business Conduct and IPG would investigate any such report.
