Human rights due diligence and supply chain
Process for assessing human rights risks and impacts	We assess and consider the social, cultural, environmental, economic and human rights impact of our operations on others, and conduct due diligence where appropriate [Human Rights Policy]. We strive to operate in accordance with global standards on human rights practices, such as IRMA's Standard for Responsible Mining. The IRMA standard includes conducting human rights risk assessments at mine sites. In 2024 we began a new human rights risk assessment at our Salar de Atacama site in Chile which we completed in early 2025. The assessment revealed that our operations are aligned with international human rights standards and that we have robust policies, procedures and practices in place to protect the rights of our employees, suppliers and communities. We have developed a comprehensive action plan for continuous improvement and remain committed to transparency and accountability as we continue to work toward ensuring we uphold the highest standards in our human rights practices. [2024 Sustainability Report].	Human Rights Policy (December 15, 2022) 2024 Sustainability Report, pg 37	https://www.albemarle.com/sites/default/files/gc_pdf/Human%20Rights.pdf https://www.albemarle.com/sites/default/files/2025-05/albemarle-sustainability-report-2024.pdf
Heightened human rights due diligence in Conflict Affected and High Risk Areas (CAHRAs)	Our commitment to human rights is supported by our policies, procedures, and related processes, including: . . . Our supply chain mapping and due diligence process set out in our Supplier (Modern Slavery) Due Diligence Procedure, which holistically manages supply chain risks associated with modern slavery and sourcing from conflict-affected and high-risk areas (CAHRAs) in alignment with the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) Guidance for Responsible Supply Chains of Minerals from Conflict-Affected and High-Risk Areas;	Responsible Sourcing Policy (4/3/2024)	https://www.albemarle.com/sites/default/files/2024-06/responsible_sourcing_policy_1.pdf
Affected stakeholder engagement	We seek to establish long-term community relationships based on meaningful engagement, care, respect, trust, transparency, honesty, humility and good faith. Human rights requirements in supplier code/requirements	We Similarly Expect Our Business Partners to . . . Respect the human rights of their employees and contractors, and treat them with dignity and respect, consistent with the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights. . . We Expect Our Business Partners to: . . . Comply with applicable laws, regulations, and their own policies concerning community engagement, indigenous people and human rights. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Consider the social, cultural, human rights, environmental and economic impact of their operations on their communities and other stakeholders. • Take action to identify, prevent and, where necessary, mitigate and remediate adverse human rights impacts. These impacts are directly connected to their operations and relationships, consistent with the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights. • Maintain the safety and security of their operations, while respecting the human rights of those in their host communities. This includes ensuring that all security providers follow recognized international standards.
