

Mail.ru response

“We have always been dedicated to users’ freedom of expression and privacy. We believe that all users of Mail.ru Group, whether individuals or organizations, should have the ability to freely express themselves, share their opinions and have easy access to content.

Our services allow our users to meet other people and share important life’s moments, and users themselves decide what they want to share and with whom. While operating our services we respect and promote the rights provided for by the International Bill of Human Rights and respect the global nature of such rights, including freedom of expression and online privacy, while being in compliance with local laws and regulation.”