

Total's Position – January 28, 2020

Total is sorry to see municipalities and NGOs take legal action, when solutions to address both the need for affordable energy for all and climate change require cooperation among the various stakeholders.

We have long publicly recognized climate challenges and take them into account in our strategy. Well before Vigilance Plans were legally mandated, we published information about Total's strategy and the measures we are taking to make a responsible contribution to the achievement of the Paris Agreement's objective.

In particular, we contribute by managing our own greenhouse gas emissions and by striving to make the products used by our customers less carbon intensive.

We detail our initiatives in various Total publications, including the Climate Report, published regularly since 2016, and the statement of non-financial performance.

Total's Vigilance Plan complies with the French law on duty of care. The 2019 Vigilance Plan can be read here, in Section 3.5 of the 2018 Management Report:

<https://www.total.com/sites/default/files/atoms/files/ddr2018-en.pdf>

In particular, the document contains the:

- Plan, which mentions climate change (under 3.5.2).
- A report on the 2018 Vigilance Plan's implementation (3.5.9) in which we list the emissions associated with our activities (scopes 1 & 2) and specify the steps taken to curtail them (3.5.9.4).

Total is always open to constructive dialogue on these issues.
