

General Dynamics response re allegation that it is profiting from the Trump administration practice of separating migrant and asylum-seeking children from their parents

21 June 2018

Business & Human Rights Resource Centre invited General Dynamics to respond to the following article:

- “Defense contractors cashing in on immigrant kids’ detention.” The Daily Beast, 14 June 2018

General Dynamics sent the following response:

“General Dynamics Information Technology has provided support to unaccompanied minors through its work with the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR), a part of the Department of Health and Human Services, since 2000.

This includes casework support services to help ensure special needs of unaccompanied children are met, including medical requirements, and to facilitate family reunification, only after children are under the care of Health and Human Services.

General Dynamics Information Technology has no role in the family separation policy, nor a role in the construction or operation of detention facilities.”