SRSB on Business and Human Rights
As of 10 AUGUST 2010

Introduction

In addition to the official reports that the SRSB has submitted to the Human Rights Council (HRC) since his appointment in 2005,<sup>1</sup> he has sought to engage the broader business and human rights community directly. He views knowledge-sharing as one important means of advancing the business and human rights agenda, and to this end arranged early on for the creation of a public website providing access to all relevant documentation.

The SRSB's website is accessible at: <http://www.business-humanrights.org/SpecialRepPortal/Home>, and is updated on a regular basis. The SRSB is grateful to the Business and Human Rights Resource Centre for administering the website. In addition the SRSB has launched two further websites related to his work. The first, launched in December 2008, is BASESwiki (www.baseswiki.org) – an online resource focused on the non-judicial mechanisms available around the world to help companies and their external stakeholders resolve disputes. It is a global, interactive forum where anyone can share, access and discuss information about these mechanisms and the resources and experts that can support their use. The second, launched in 2009, is an online forum open to all stakeholders for dialogue and engagement on the corporate responsibility to respect human rights, the second pillar of the "Protect, Respect and Remedy" Framework the SRSB proposed, and the HRC unanimously welcomed, in 2008 for moving the business and human rights agenda forward – see below for more detail. The forum is available at: <http://www.srsbconsultation.org/>.

This briefing note includes all documentation prepared by or for the SRSB to date. In addition to the SRSB's official reports, it also includes briefing papers prepared by the SRSB's research team as well as submissions from a variety of different stakeholders.

The documents are divided into the following groupings: (1) official documents (reports and annexes) submitted by the SRSB to the HRC; (2) the analyses conducted by the SRSB's team on the subject of state responsibilities to regulate and adjudicate corporate activities under the United Nations' core human rights treaties; (3) documentation related to consultations held by the SRSB; (4) general briefing papers and submissions prepared by or to inform the SRSB; and (5) correspondence with non-government organizations (NGOs).

Documents are provided in chronological order where appropriate and official UN document numbers are included where available. Internet links to the English version of each document are also listed.<sup>2</sup> Speeches, interviews and press releases are not generally included but can be found on the SRSB's website.

(1) Official documents: reports and annexes

The SRSG has reported five times to the HRC – in 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009 and 2010. All documents formally submitted to the HRC to date are listed below, as well as the SRSG’s presentations of his reports to the Council and responses from state delegations. Press articles and other media commentary on the SRSG’s reports are not included but are available on his website. Feedback from NGOs and corporations is not featured here but is set out in sections 4(c) and 5 below.

On 18 June 2008, the HRC adopted, without a vote, a resolution extending the SRSG’s mandate until June 2011. Resolution A/HRC/RES/8/7 is available at: http://ap.ohchr.org/documents/E/HRC/resolutions/A\_HRC\_RES\_8\_7.pdf. A major part of this resolution was that the HRC welcomed the “Protect, Respect and Remedy” policy framework the SRSG had proposed for better managing business and human rights challenges. Now widely referred to as the UN Framework, it rests on three pillars: the State duty to protect against human rights abuses by third parties, including business, through appropriate policies, regulation, and adjudication; the corporate responsibility to respect human rights, which means to act with due diligence to avoid infringing on the rights of others; and greater access by victims to effective remedy, judicial and non-judicial.

In its 2008 resolution, the HRC extended the SRSG’s mandate with two main tasks: “operationalizing” the UN Framework—that is, providing concrete guidance and recommendations to States, businesses and other actors on the practical meaning and implications of the three pillars and their interrelationships; and “promoting” the Framework, through coordinating with relevant international and regional organizations as well as other stakeholders. A short summary of the UN Framework is available at: <http://www.reports-and-materials.org/Ruggie-protect-respect-remedy-framework.pdf>. Readers should look at the SRSG’s official HRC reports from 2008 onwards for more detail. Feedback from other stakeholders on the Framework is available in consultation reports as well as submissions since the Framework was proposed.

(2) State responsibilities to regulate and adjudicate corporate activities under the United Nations' core human rights treaties

In 2006 the SRSG's team, with the assistance of the United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, embarked on a project to examine states' obligations in relation to corporate activity under the United Nations' core human rights treaties. Each report maps the scope and content of states parties' responsibilities to regulate and adjudicate the actions of business enterprises under the particular treaty, drawing on commentaries from the relevant treaty body as appropriate.

This series was undertaken to assist the SRSG's work under sub-para (b) of his mandate, which asks him to "elaborate on the role of states in effectively regulating and adjudicating the role of transnational corporations and other business enterprises with regard to human rights, including through international cooperation."

As set out above, a report summarizing the main findings and trends from the treaty-specific reports was submitted by the SRSG to the HRC, as Addendum 1 to his March 2007 report.

In June 2007, the SRSG addressed the sixth Inter-Committee meeting of the human rights treaty bodies to discuss the series, and business and human rights issues more broadly. Links to the background paper and summary report for this meeting are included below. The background paper provides an updated view of the main trends from the series.

There are no official UN document numbers for the individual treaty reports. Please also note that the reports were numbered chronologically according to the date of adoption of the relevant treaty rather than the date each report was completed.

(3) Consultations held by the SRSG

The SRSG has held numerous multi-stakeholder consultations to encourage dialogue and inform his work. In the lead-up to his 2007 report, he convened three regional consultations, four workshops of legal experts, and two sector-specific meetings.

The autumn of 2007 has been a particularly busy time for the SRSG in preparing for his 2008 report. He held five multi-stakeholder consultations addressing various elements of the three “baskets” within which he plans to organize his recommendations to the HRC: the state duty to protect, the corporate responsibility to respect, and the need for more effective grievance mechanisms to populate the relatively barren space between litigation and campaigns against companies.

Set out below are the background papers and summary reports from these consultations. Please note that while Addendum 2 to the SRSG’s 2007 report summarized the 2006 consultations on the attribution of corporate responsibility under international law, as well as the permissible scope of extraterritorial regulation, the complete reports for these consultations are listed below because Addendum 2 provided only the abridged versions. (Only background papers and summary reports are set out below – submissions from NGOs regarding various consultations and the SRSG’s responses are included in section 5.)

The SRSG is grateful to the governments providing financial and logistical support for these consultations. He is also appreciative to the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights for its assistance as well as to numerous NGOs and academic institutions which helped to host and organize various events – these parties are acknowledged in the summary reports for each meeting.

The SRSG has also held civil society consultations on five continents, visited the operations of firms in four industry sectors in developing countries and had discussions with representatives of all relevant multilateral institutions and some government officials. Records of these meetings are not publicly available though more information may be obtained from the SRSG as required.

(4) General briefing papers and submissions

The 2007 report drew on some two-dozen research papers prepared by or for the SRSG. Since then, the number of briefing papers, discussion papers and submissions provided to the SRSG by external parties has continued to grow, with the SRSG receiving material from a variety of stakeholders, including NGOs, business associations and law firms. The SRSG's own team has also contributed several research and discussion papers, sometimes in conjunction with other organizations, including the International Finance Corporation.

Where publicly available, these external and internal papers are listed below, grouped depending on the type of author. In rare cases where authors were comfortable with making their work publicly available, but not for attribution, the relevant documents have been listed as being produced by the SRSG's team.

Documents are labelled as discussion papers, briefing papers, reference papers or submissions. By way of explanation, discussion papers are shorter papers, generally prepared by the SRSG's team, intended to summarize the current state of play and engender debate on a particular issue. Briefing papers, also produced by the SRSG's team, are more detailed research reports examining issues in greater depth. Reference papers are not produced by the SRSG's team but have been identified by the SRSG as providing useful analyses of issues falling within the mandate. Those reference papers that were explicitly prepared to inform the SRSG are included below. Submissions are papers from external parties that are designed to inform and advise the SRSG, usually containing recommendations rather than descriptive information.

Readers should note that the SRSG expects additional submissions from several parties in the lead up to the 2008 report. These submissions will be highlighted on the SRSG's homepage as "new additions" as they become available.

(a) SRSG's team

Set out below are discussion papers and briefing papers prepared by the SRSG and his team. Note that some of the documents were summarized in the four addenda attached to the SRSG's 2007 report but are listed separately here given that not all of them were reproduced in full in the addenda.

The table below also lists feedback from external parties on documents prepared by the SRSG and his team as well as forthcoming publications.

(5) Correspondence with NGOs

The SRSB has been encouraged by the interest taken by NGOs in his mandate and has greatly benefited from extensive dialogue with these parties, both at consultations and through more formal correspondence. Included in section 4 above are the research papers NGOs have submitted to the mandate. Illustrated below is other correspondence from NGOs commenting on and providing general suggestions regarding the work of the mandate. As highlighted below, the SRSB endeavors to respond to correspondence from NGOs where appropriate.

Also listed below is a selection of press releases from NGOs discussing the SRSB's work.

Note that a significant number of NGO submissions were made to the October 2009 OHCHR consultation on the operationalization of the SRSB's Protect, Respect and Remedy Framework. They are available at: <http://www.business-humanrights.org/SpecialRepPortal/Home/OHCHRConsultation-Geneva5-6Oct2009>.
